One time at work a man told me something

One time at work a man told me that if he won the lottery he would move to Australia, just disappear without telling his wife or even his daughters

One time at work a man told me that each of his six children had different mothers and two of them were born on the same day just mere hours apart from each other

One time at work a man told me that he preferred the company of his best friend and that it was impossible to be friends with the person you were married to

One time at work a man told me something that I didn't want to know about him
